America, Britain and the War of Independence: The Papers of Jeffrey, Lord Amherst

Amherst played a pivotal role in the American War of Independence. He was in continual contact with the King and his First Minister, and with a diverse range of American governors, ordinary soldiers and the British political and military elite. His papers illustrate first hand the key issues from which revolution grew. His personal journals and correspondence also detail Amherst's earlier European campaigns, and provide a valuable social and political commentary on the events of the day.

America's Architectural History: Key Titles from the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries

PREVIOUS TITLE: American Architectural Books

Some of the most important printed sources of architectural history from the 17th and 18th centuries are brought together in this collection. Based on the bibliographies American Architectural Books, by Henry-Russell Hitchcock and A List of Architectural Books Available Before the Revolution by Helen Park, this collection makes available more than 900 of the most significant titles in architectural history. The collection is filmed using the same sequence as the listings in the Hitchcock and Park bibliographies, presenting all titles that could be located. The number assigned in the bibliographies appears before each title in the film. The collection includes a printed guide.

American Literary Manuscripts, 1650- 1850

This varied collection provides comprehensive coverage of sources from the period 1650 to 1850, which witnessed the birth of American literature and the evolution of new and distinctive styles. Included are verse, short stories, prose fiction, satirical plays and humorous writings by native or naturalized American authors from this period. Also included are a number of sermons, speeches, belles lettres and journals deemed to be of considerable literary interest (e.g. the sermons of Cotton Mather, the Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, etc.). A number of authors have been included whose life and literary output extend beyond 1850 (e.g. William Cullen Bryant, 1794-1874), since the bulk of their most important writing occurred within the specified period. The strength of this collection lies in its broad coverage of both major and minor writers, including Washington Irving, Edgar Allan Poe, James Fenimore Cooper, Stephen Foster, Thomas Paine, Margaret Fuller, James Kirke Paulding, FitzGreene Halleck, Sarah Wentworth Morton, Lydia Sigourney, Estelle Lewis and Frances Sargent Osgood.

American Fiction, 1774-1910

As the modern nation evolved, America witnessed tumultuous changes in every aspect of society, from politics and religion to economics and morality. Contemporary fiction reflected these radical shifts, as writers attempted to make sense of the changing world around them.

This collection will appeal both to the researcher who seeks insights into a culture in turmoil, and to the scholar who is interested in exploring these texts as works of art in their own right. American Fiction, 1774-1910 contains pre-1900 works taken directly from Lyle H. Wright's American Fiction: A Contribution Towards a Bibliography (San Marino, California, 1965-69); and post-1900 works from the Library of Congress Shelf List of American Adult Fiction. It includes 10,800 novels, romances, tales, short stories, fictitious biographies, travels and sketches, allegories and tract-like tales typifying the development of American literature in a changing culture. A standard reference work for literary scholars, librarians and historians, Wright's collection on microfilm is nearly complete—perhaps one of the most comprehensive in existence -- and will be an asset to libraries providing source material on American literature. American Fiction, 1774-1910 provides the user with access to rare editions of the texts as they first appeared, as well as access to the works of minor authors whose writings may be

American Literary Annuals and Gift Books, 1825-1865

Based on Ralph Thompson's definitive bibliography of the same name, American Literary Annuals and Gift Books, 1825-1865, contains some of the best literature and art from the pre-Civil War period. This collection contains 469 titles, focusing on The Atlantic Souvenir: A Christmas and New Year's Offering -- a lavishly decorated, fully illustrated anthology of prose and poetry. The Indices to American Literary Annuals and Gift Books, 1825-1865, enables researchers to locate individual stories, poems and illustrations. The works of specific writers, engravers, printers and editors within the gift books and literary annuals appear on the microfilm. Part One of the indices reproduces the title page, publishing information, table of contents and list of illustrations with painters and engravers for each of Thompson's major entries, arranged in alphabetical order. Part Two contains indices for editors, publishers, cities and states of publication, stereotypes, printers, titles of poems and stories, authors, titles of illustrations, painters and engravers. The order of the indices follows the order of the information found in the entries in Part One.

American Natural History, 1769-1865

This collection, based on the Bibliography of American Natural History 1769-1865 (1924-29) by Max Meisel, encompasses the writing from explorers' journals and travelers' accounts during American frontier days. American Natural History, 1769-1865 presents the writings of explorers and settlers who examined, identified and classified specimens of every sort—from animal and plant life to the varied aspects of geology. The records of such notable naturalists as John Charles Fremont, Matthew Calbraith Perry, Meriweather Lewis, Henry Rowe Schoolcraft and Zebulon Montgomery Pike, among others, have formed a descriptive literature that is an integral part of the written history of this country. The material derived from Max Meisel's work -- articles on botany, geology, mineralogy, paleontology and zoology -- has been collected from the numerous scientific journals, federal reports and publications of science organizations and societies that developed since the late eighteenth century in an effort to organize scientific inquiry. This constitutes nearly 300 articles, representing an extensive selection of Academy papers and periodicals. A printed guide is also available.

Bostwick Company Business Records, 1819-1856

The Bostwick Company Business Records consist of the business records of William Bostwick (1796-1863), merchant of Augusta, Georgia, and New Haven, Connecticut, including records of firms with which he was associated and their antecedents. Bostwick was a cotton factor and wholesale-retail merchant. His business prospered in the early nineteenth century. It also survived the economic panic of 1837 and the national economic depression which followed and lasted until 1843. The firms represented are: Edward Campfield & Co., John Burton, Burton & Bostwick, Banks & Baird, and Bostwick & Baird, the last-named becoming the firm of William Bostwick in 1832. All of these firms were located in Augusta, Georgia, and were primarily engaged in the cotton business. The records are arranged alphabetically by title and run nearly continuously from 1819 to 1856 with the records of succeeding companies often being simply continued on old record books. An indication has been given under each of the entries in the register as to which companies are included with that particular set of records.

City Directories of the United States

Based on Dorothea N. Spear's Bibliography of American Directories Through 1860 and material from the American Antiquarian Society of Worcester, Massachusetts City directories are among the most comprehensive sources of historical and personal information available. Their emphasis on ordinary people and the commonplace event make them important in the study of American history and culture. One of the few means available for researchers to uncover information on specific individuals, these directories provide such information as: addresses; city and county officers; heads of families, firms and names of those doing business in the city; lists of city residents; occupations; and street directories. In addition, researchers can learn much about day-to-day life through analysis of information on churches, public and private schools, benevolent, literary and other associations, and banks. Finally, most directories include advertising, often illustrating the products being sold. This information lends valuable insight into the city's lifestyles and illustrates popular trends.

Early American Medical Imprints, 1668-1820

Based on the National Library of Medicine's Early American Medical Imprints: A Guide to Works Printed in the United States, 1668-1820 by Robert B. Austin, this collection offers publications reflecting medical thought in America prior to 1821. Selected from the holdings of the College of Physicians Library in Philadelphia, the New York Academy of Medicine Library, the History of Medicine Division of the National Library of Medicine in Bethesda and numerous other libraries, these publications mark the beginning of American medical literature and history. Early American Medical Imprints, 1668-1820 encompasses more than 1,600 titles of rare and fragile works not easily available from other sources. The collection presents writings by the trained physicians, clergy and educated persons dealing with the art of medicine of the times and includes many widely used American editions of works originally published abroad as well as American works. In most cases, the film presents the earliest edition (or earliest available edition) of each title, or the first edition printed in America. Later editions of particular titles are also included where a substantial revision of the earlier work has created a significant change in the material. Early American Medical Imprints: A Guide to Works Printed in the United States, 1668-1820 is a guide providing brief descriptions of those titles listed in the bibliography while directing the researcher to the appropriate microfilm reel number. A copy is provided with each order for the complete collection. Also provided is Early American Medical Imprints, 1668-1820, Subject, Name, and Format Index to the Microfilm Collection, compiled by Bertha Almagro. This guide serves as a cross-reference to the Austin bibliography and the microfilm.

The Papers of Albert Gallatin

Albert Gallatin (1761–1849) is best remembered as a brilliant financier who served Jefferson and Madison as secretary of the treasury. His equally impressive diplomatic career included appointments to Russia, France and Great Britain, and a role in negotiating the Treaty of Ghent. Gallatin's papers reflect his wide range of interests and are revealing sources on the early treasury; national fiscal policy; currency, banking, and commerce; American diplomacy through the late 1820s; and, thanks to his own studies, the growth of ethnological interest in the Indian tribes of North and Central America.

Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture: Selected Collections

Katz/Prince Collection

This collection contains the research notes, correspondence, and manuscripts generated by Bernard and Jonathan Katz in writing about a free black pioneer of eighteenth century Massachusetts. Black Woman: A Fictionalized Biography of Lucy Terry Prince (Pantheon, 1973) follows the life of a former slave who became a substantial landowner and is considered the earliest African-American poet. The book was begun by jazz historian Bernard Katz and was completed by his son, Jonathan, after Bernard’s death in 1970. The two men’s notes and other papers provide an excellent starting point for research into Lucy Terry Prince, while also documenting the Katz’s’ working methods. This collection reproduces all surviving material gathered by the Katz’s in researching and writing about Lucy Terry Prince. The materials are divided into the following sections: • Successive typescript drafts, with handwritten annotations, of Black Woman. • The Katz’s’ research file (1967–1973) broken down into alphabetical subject files covering specific incidents, such as “Abijah’s Death.” • Research notes on two series of catalog cards arranged in alphabetical order by subject.

Sources of Massachusetts Legal History, 1628-1839

This comprehensive collection is a rich resource for research into legal, social, economic, military and political history. Sixteen key titles provide information from this period from sources otherwise difficult to obtain. Beginning with the records of March 1628-29, the collection contains all of the legislation enacted by the Massachusetts Bay Colony as well as the litigation that passed through its courts, constituting the first comprehensive body of law to be developed in North America. Covering the years 1628-1839, Sources of Massachusetts Legal History presents those laws that established precedents for all of the New England colonies as well as many of the western states and territories. Its wealth of original documents and vital source material make this collection a valuable addition to law, business, and academic libraries. A copy of Sources of Massachusetts Legal History: Guide to the Microfilm Collection is provided with each order for the complete collection. The guide consists of reel summary, author index, and title listing. The author and title indexes are arranged alphabetically; the reel summary numerically.

Benjamin Franklin Papers

The papers of Benjamin Franklin (1706-1790) provide data relating to the life and work of America's first international celebrity. A rich source on eighteenth-century America and international relations during the revolutionary period, the Franklin papers contain documents dated as early as 1726. The bulk of the material covers the 1770s and 1780s. The collection is divided into three series:

Series I (1772 to 1783) contains materials that relate to Franklin's mission to France; journals, records of negotiations, and correspondence.

Series II (1726 to 1818) consists of Franklin's general incoming and outgoing correspondence and miscellany.

Series III (1728 to 1841) includes original manuscripts of Articles of Beliefs and Acts of Religion, a facsimile copy of his ledger as postmaster general, and other materials.

East Florida Records

The East Florida papers comprise the archives of the Spanish government of East Florida between 1783, when Britain retroceded the area to Spain, and 1821, when the American authorities took possession. This collection contains materials that reflect most aspects of Florida history during the last generation of Spanish control. Spanish governmental policy is revealed in such series as the governor's correspondence with various authorities in Mexico and the United States. Other series, such as the correspondence with the intendant and with the accountant of the exchequer, are concerned with the finances of government, while the Panton and Leslie Papers, and the many records of vessels' entries and clearance, legal matters, relations with Indians, and correspondence with authorities in various outposts, also figure prominently. Of special note are copies of the Montiano letters and the Index of Royal Decrees, dated 1595 to 1762, which relate to the earlier periods of Spanish control; in addition, several items date from after 1821. This large and detailed collection is one of the most important sources on East Florida, shedding light on the

The Ebenezer Hazard Collection

The Hazard collection chronicles the life and research of Ebenezer Hazard (1744-1817), "America's first historical editor." A businessman, postmaster, and antiquarian, Hazard performed a service of major importance with his Historical Collections; Consisting of State Papers and Other Historical Documents; Intended as Materials for an History of the United States of America (1792-94). The first and larger part consists of Hazard's personal and professional papers, followed by the material he collected. Highlights from this part include:

- Material concerning the Stamp Act.
- A transcript of Benjamin Franklin's "Plan of Proposed Union of Massachusetts and the other Colonies for their mutual defense."
- Transcripts concerning Massachusetts history, with notes on Plymouth Colony.
- Records of the United Colonies of New England.
- A meteorological journal.
- Letters and other papers from the United States Military Academy.

The second part of the Hazard collection consists of additions made by Ebenezer's son Samuel.

The George Chalmers Collection

George Chalmers (1742-1825), Maryland loyalist, antiquarian, and colonial administrator, authored An Introduction to the History of the Revolt of the British Colonies, one of the first histories of the American Revolution to rely on public records and to stress the importance of the colonies as part of the British Empire. The collection consists of Chalmers's notes, his copies of documents, and original documents he acquired in the course of his researches. Chalmers's papers relate not only to the American colonies but also to many other parts of the globe affected by British power, including Africa, Nova Scotia, the Bahama Islands, and Great Britain. A great variety of topics is covered as well: investments in the Bahamas, laws of Barbados, legal cases relating to America and the West Indies, trade with Great Britain, imports and exports of Scotland, and many other subjects.

Typical documents provided here include:

- The 1746 appeal of the Mohegan Indians.
- "Short Account of the English Plantations in America," 1688.
- A 1756 journal of the siege of St. Philip's Castle in
- Minorca.
- Walter Homes's 1770 military journal.

George Washington Papers

This invaluable resource includes approximately 65,000 papers, the largest collection of original Washington documents in the world. Document types in the collection include correspondence, letterbooks, commonplace books, diaries, journals, financial account books, military records, reports, and notes accumulated by Washington from 1741 through 1799. Commonplace books, correspondence, and travel journals document Washington's younger years as a Virginia county surveyor and as colonel of the militia during the French and Indian War. The microfilm also documents Washington's election as delegate to the First and Second Continental Congresses and his command of the American army during the Revolutionary War, as well as his two presidential administrations from 1789 through 1797. Because of Washington's wide range of interests, activities, and correspondents (from ordinary citizens to celebrated figures), his papers are a rich source of information on Early American history.

Series 1. Exercise books, diaries, and surveys (1741-1799).

The exercise books include one volume of "Form of Writing," containing transcripts by Washington and "Rules of Civility," and two volumes of school copybooks. The diaries include Washington's record of his activities, weather observations, and memoranda on agriculture and other subjects. Surveys include notes and records of surveys and land entries, chronologically arranged. Reels 1-2.

The John Davis Papers

Dated 1735-1783, these papers document John Davis's service as assistant and deputy quartermaster in Pennsylvania. The papers are chronologically arranged and include orders, receipts, appointments, accounts, military communications, and private business correspondence. Davis's correspondents include Clement Biddle, Nathanael Greene, Charles Pettit, and James Wilson.

L110151 Shelf No.: MSS 17,137. 5 reels (nos. 79-83).

The John Fitch Papers

The John Fitch Papers reproduces the personal and scientific papers of the man who designed and operated the first steamboat in the New World. Fitch's 60-foot craft, launched in 1788, provided regular passenger service on the Delaware River twenty years before Robert Fulton's better-known Clermont made its first trip on the Hudson. Fitch was unable to make his operation pay, however, and he abandoned it for other business pursuits. The bulk of this collection, dated 1743-1798, relates to Fitch's experimental work with the steamboat. The papers include correspondence, diaries, financial records, surveyor's notes, steamboat sketches, and manuscripts of writings on the steamboat, the Universal Society, and chemicals. Fitch's correspondents include Robert Fulton, Thomas Mifflin, Robert Morris, and David Rittenhouse. Also provided in this collection is a small selection of papers of the architect William Thornton (1759-1828). Among the earliest leaders of the Industrial Revolution in America, John Fitch exemplified inventors struggling to derive monetary profit from scientific research.

Louisiana Miscellany

The varied documents reproduced in this microfilm publication chronicle the history of Louisiana in the eighteenth and early nineteenth century. Researchers will find here a great deal of information on the French and Spanish management of Louisiana from 1731 to 1799, and on the French, Spanish, and American management from 1800 to 1837.

Among the more significant items included are:

- Jean-Baptiste B.nard de la Harpe's Journal Historique oncernat l'Etablissement des François . la Lo.isiannetir. des Memoires de M. d'Iberville et de Bienville.
- A 1763 file on the value of Louisiana.
- Transcripts of twenty-eight documents regarding Florida and Louisiana, dated 1493-1780.
- A surveyor's notebook, 1795-1797.
- Compilations of vital statistics from family Bibles and cemeteries.
- Papers relating to the purchase of Louisiana.

The Papers of Alexander Hamilton

Alexander Hamilton (1757-1804), secretary of the treasury, inspector-general of the army, and New York lawyer, was indisputably among the most powerful men in early U.S. history. Through The Federalist Papers, the Bank of the United States, the Louisiana Purchase, and the Constitution, Hamilton's efforts and ideas have had a lasting influence on the nation. Hamilton's public career is reflected in the papers reproduced here, which are dated 1708 to 1903. Included are correspondence, speeches, legal papers, and similar items. Over half of the collection relates to the period Hamilton served as inspector-general for the army and drafted reports and position papers on the military establishment during the Quasi-War with France. The collection includes the following types of materials:

- General correspondence (1734-1804), including letters received, drafts, recipient copies, transcripts of letters sent, and attachments.
- Speeches and writings (1778-1804), including draft versions of Hamilton's four major reports as secretary of the treasury and other articles.
- Family, financial, and miscellaneous papers.
- Legal file (1708-1804), providing an excellent overview of Hamilton's law practice.

The Papers of Andrew Jackson Donelson

Andrew Jackson Donelson (1799-1871), nephew of and private secretary to President Jackson, was a soldier, politician, editor, and lawyer. He served Jackson in Florida as aide-de-camp in the Seminole campaign. In 1844 he was sent as charg. d'affaires to the republic of Texas to conduct negotiations for annexation. Following success in this mission, he served as minister to Prussia and in 1856 ran for vice president as the American Party candidate. This collection is divided into six series:

- General correspondence (1813-1869).
- Additional correspondence (1835-1894).
- Letter copybook (1846-1848).
- Miscellaneous papers (1785-1849).
- Family papers (1779-1943).
- Printed matter, documents, indexes.

Subjects addressed in the correspondence include Jackson's presidential campaigns, the Eaton affair, the Donelson-Jackson breach that resulted, and the subsequent cabinet reorganization of 1831.

The Papers of James Kent

This collection documents the life and work of James Kent (1763-1847), a jurist who authored some of the most influential decisions in American legal history. Kent was named the first professor of law at Columbia College in 1793. His career at the bench began in 1798 when he was appointed to the New York Supreme Court. In 1826 Kent began his Commentaries on American Law, a systematic treatment of international law, American constitutional law, the sources of state law, and the law of personal rights and property. The Kent collection is divided into the following series:

- Correspondence and other papers (1779-1854).
- Register of law cases (1791-1803).
- Journals (1797-1848) describing over one hundred trips along the eastern seaboard.

The Papers of John Holker

The Papers of John Holker presents an all-but-complete picture of U.S. commerce during the Revolutionary War. Holker (1745-1822) was French consul general in the United States, an agent for the French fleet in America, and a silent partner with Parker, Duer & Company, which supplied provisions to the Continental Army. Among the materials contained in this collection are records of the expenditures for the French fleet at Boston; accounts of the sale of prizes taken by d'Estaing's fleet; and important correspondence relating to the fur and ginseng trades. The papers cover the period from 1777 to 1822 and include the following series:

- General correspondence (1777-1822), including correspondence of the Commercial Committee of the Continental Congress.
- Le Ray de Chaumont's Invoice Book (1777-1779).
- Correspondence (1778-1779) between Holker and Robert Morris.
- George W. Stillman's Navigational Exercise Booklets (1805), including the journal of a voyage from Boston to Madeira.

This collection is an invaluable source on the military and economic assistance given by the French to the struggling colonies. Of equal importance, The Papers of John Holker provides a well documented view of commerce in the United States from the war years to the adoption of the Constitution.

The Papers of Neil Jamieson

The Neil Jamieson papers are an important addendum to the records of Glassford & Company. Jamieson was the resident partner of Glassford, Gordon, Monteath, & Company, one of the firms involved in the interlocking partnerships of Glasgow tobacco trading companies. These papers present an overall picture of the tobacco trade with Scotland and are particularly illustrative of the store system used by Glasgow merchants. The records cover the years 1757-1789 and include correspondence, financial papers, legal papers, and miscellaneous records. Included among the correspondence are numerous letters from other Glasgow agents in Maryland and Virginia. The Jamieson papers also present information on the pattern of trade that existed among Spain, the West Indies, and Virginia.

L110157. Shelf No.: MSS 17,575. 8 reels.

The Papers of Nicholas Biddle

Nicholas Biddle (1786-1844), a man often seen as the embodiment of "Old Philadelphia," had equally distinguished careers in literature and finance. The papers furnish a detailed view of Biddle's life and work, particularly his years as president of the controversial Bank of the United States. A graduate of what is now Princeton University; Nicholas Biddle served as a diplomatic secretary in France and England before being admitted to the bar in 1809. During the same year he became involved with Port Folio, the country's leading literary periodical, of which he became the editor in 1812. His interest in public life deepened with the advent of the War of 1812, when he served in the state senate and helped the War Department get loans. He next turned his attention to banking, when President Monroe invited him to become one of five directors of the (second) Bank of the United States. Biddle served as its president from 1823 to 1839. Following his resignation from the bank, Biddle devoted himself again to literary pursuits. The papers in this collection date from 1775 to 1846 and are divided into two main series, as follows:

General correspondence. Reels 1-41.

Papers of the Roger Jones Family

These papers form a record of the descendants of Captain Roger Jones (1625?-1701), who accompanied Lord Culpeper to America in 1680. Composed essentially of the papers of the first sons through the fourth generation, the collection chronicles the transition of the Joneses from an English to an American family.

The collection is divided into two series.

- Family Papers, dated 1649-1896 – includes correspondence between family members, business associates, and others; financial papers; legal documents; and memoranda.

The Papers of Vicente Sebastian Pintado

The papers of Vicente Sebastian Pintado provide unique information pertaining to late eighteenth- and early nineteenth- century Florida. Dated 1781-1842, the collection consists of papers relating to the personal and professional life of this military engineer, assistant surveyor, and surveyor general of Spanish West Florida. Among the holdings reproduced here are personal and professional correspondence, court transcripts, surveys, notebooks, plats, land grants, maps, and petitions. The collection includes documentation on the Nicolls raid in the Apalachicola River area during the War of 1812, the 1804 and 1805 Kemper brothers' raids on Louisiana, and a Spanish/Talapuche Indian vocabulary. Correspondents include Carlos de Grand Pre, Governor at Baton Rouge; Ira Kneeland, Pintado's deputy surveyor; Cristoval de Armas; and Vincent Folch, U.S. governor of West Florida. This collection is a valuable resource on the critical transitional period from the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 to the ultimate cession by Spain of the Floridas to the United States.

The Papers of William Short

The Papers of William Short (1759-1849) provide a detailed picture of the political and business activities of this diplomat and private secretary to Thomas Jefferson. Short served in various diplomatic posts, including chargé d'affaires, minister to The Hague, and negotiator of European loans to fund American government debts. Most of the material in the collection covers the years from 1785 to 1795, the period when Short assumed his diplomatic role. The holdings are composed mainly of outgoing letters, but also included are incoming letters, financial statements, accounts, and ledgers. The papers well document Short's business activities after 1810, during which time he amassed a fortune by investments in canals, railroads, banks, and western lands. Prominent correspondents include Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, John Adams, James Madison, William and Mary classmate James Monroe, and Thomas Paine.

The Records of John Glassford & Company

The records of John Glassford & Company provide an extensive view of the business affairs of John Glassford (1715-1783), one of the most prosperous Scottish tobacco lords, and of the many firms with which he was associated. Glassford was a leading force in the establishment of his city as an international trading center. The records reproduced here reflect the daily transactions of Glassford & Company's branch stores, such as those that were established along the Potomac River for the direct purchase of tobacco from planters. Spanning the years 1753-1844, the records include ledgers, journals, daybooks, inventories, cashbooks, and letterbooks for the mercantile firms that represented or succeeded Glassford & Company in Maryland and Virginia. Among the firms documented here are Glassford, Henderson, & Company; Glassford, Gordon, Monteath, & Company; Findlay, Hopkins, & Company; and Jamieson, Johnstone, & Company. Prominent figures mentioned in the collection include William Byrd III, Landon Carter, Henry Lee, Richard Lee, George Mason, and George Washington.

The Robert Morris Collection

The papers of Robert Morris contain financial, legislative, and personal information on the Philadelphia merchant whose efforts to fund the Continental Army won him the title “financier of the American Revolution.” As superintendent of finance for the Continental Congress, Robert Morris (1734-1806) successfully worked to improve the status of the Continental dollar, the chaotic system of supplying the army, and the exhausted credit of the government. He is also notable for originally voting against the motion for independence in July of 1776, although he ultimately signed the declaration itself. Morris later served in the federal Constitutional Convention and became a U.S. senator (1789-1795). The Robert Morris collection spans the years 1776 to 1829 and is divided into five series:

- Diary in the Office of Finance, 1781-1784.
- Official letterbooks, 1781-1784.
- Private letterbooks, 1794-1798.
- Congressional proceedings, 1782-1784.
- Miscellaneous and varied papers, 1776-1829.

Shaker Community Papers

The Shakers, one of the most intriguing religious sects in America, are comprehensively documented in this collection of records from a wide variety of communities. The Shaker movement, or the United Society of Believers in Christ’s Second Appearing, originated in a Quaker revival in England in 1747. Led by James and Jane Wardley, the sect blossomed after the appearance of Ann Lee. “Mother Ann” believed herself to be the recipient of the mother element of the spirit of Christ. In 1774 she, accompanied by a few followers, emigrated to New York State and founded a colony near Albany. During the subsequent century, the Shakers became particularly well known for their belief in celibacy and their range of manufactures. By the mid-1900s, however, the movement was all but extinct. This collection consists of records of six Shaker communities in Connecticut, Kentucky, New York, and Ohio, plus material relating to eleven other communities. The collection spans the years 1792 to 1937, documenting Shaker theology and religious practices, the role of music in daily life, and the histories of various communities. Among the records are letters, diaries, covenants, financial and legal papers, hymnals, church orders, historical sketches, and biographical sketches. This large and important microfilm publication will be an invaluable addition to collections in religious studies and American history.

Thomas Jefferson Papers

Consisting of over 27,000 documents, the Thomas Jefferson Papers are the largest collection of Jefferson documents in existence. The microfilm is organized into nine series, spanning the years 1606-1827. Correspondence, memoranda, drafts of documents, and notes compose two-thirds of the papers. They document Jefferson’s activities as a second Continental Congress delegate, his drafting of the Declaration of Independence (June-July 1776), his position as governor of Virginia (1779-1781), his return to Congress as a representative (1783-1784), and his appointment as minister plenipotentiary in Europe and then minister to the Court of Louis XVI, succeeding Benjamin Franklin (1784-1789). Also thoroughly documented are his two administrations as president from 1801 through 1809, when he engineered the purchase of the Louisiana territory and maintained American neutrality in the conflict between France and Great Britain that led to the War of 1812. Correspondence, drawings, maps, and notes document the building of Washington, D.C. Jefferson’s intellectual and political interests are shown by his legal and literary commonplace books, miscellaneous bound volumes of notes and extracts, and manuscript volumes relating to seventeenth- and eighteenth-century Virginia history, some of which were part of the personal library he sold to Congress in 1815.

Series 1. General correspondence and related material (1651-1827)
