Series 3: From the Biblioteca do Paço Ducal de Vila Viçosa, Portugal

Housed in the magnificent Ducal Palace of the House of Braganza, the music library of the Fundação Bragança is a remarkable collection of little-known manuscript sources. The collection also includes manuscripts which originated in the public theatres of Lisbon, particularly the Teatro do Solitre, and some remarkable indigenous genres such as three marionette operas and “villancios,” polyphonic works performed in Church at Christmas before the emergence of opera.

1988.300. Series 3 in 3 units. 125 reels.

History of Music, 1480–1800

History of Music is a retrospective collection consisting of music and books on music printed before 1801. Representative of a wide range of music, writers, composers and national sources, this collection is extensive in its inclusion of scores, sets or parts, partbooks, song books with music, detailing the development of music through the Renaissance, Baroque and Early Classical periods. Theoretical works combined with the plentiful examples of printed music enable students to follow the development of music theory, composition and practice simultaneously.

1480. 107 reels.

Italian Music Manuscripts, c.1640–c.1820

Richly diverse and extensive, this collection holds great interest for music scholars of 17th-, 18th- and early 19th-century Italian music. The collection offers an abundance of sources for vocal and instrumental music, sacred and secular. Researchers will have the opportunity to trace the development of particular forms and styles of music, ranging from opera and oratorio to toccata.

Series 1: The Sir Michael Tippett, Sir Arthur Bliss and Gerald Finzi Manuscripts

Michael Tippett, Arthur Bliss and Gerald Finzi are considered among the 20th-century's most influential and original composers. This collection gathers manuscripts from several sources, including: Tippett's first acknowledged work, the "String Quartet No.1" (1934–1935); Bliss's "A Colour Symphony," "Morning Heroes" and the score for the film, "Things to Come"; Finzi's scores for the song cycle "By Footpath and Stile," the orchestral "A Severn Rhapsody" and several of his Thomas Hardy settings, the choral ode "Intimations of Immorality," and the "Magnificat."

H-199.000. 18 reels.

Series 2: The Elgar Diaries, Letters and Manuscripts from Birmingham University Library

This collection includes the diaries of Edward Elgar together with those of his wife Alice and daughter Carice, and cover the years 1889–1939. Of particular interest are the autographed manuscript of "The Music Makers" 1912, which forms a significant part of the collection, showing the process of composition from sketch to final draft, and a printed vocal score of "The Dream of Geronitus," annotated with Elgar's pencil observations on the first performance.

from mythology to politics. Comic operas became popular, as did grander spectacles and arias to showcase individual singers. Venetian Opera Libretti is an excellent source for studying the works of the poets Aureli, Noris, Zeno, Goldoni, Metastasio and others. Composers represented in the collection include Cavalli, Monteverdi, Cesti, Vivaldi, Albinoni, Galuppi and Hasse. In addition, the collection supports research into the literary aspects of the libretto, the staging of operas, production methods, the social issues of the times and the lives of individual composers and librettists.

1986. 41 reels.

Women Composers

For the first time, the works of significant women composers are available to study in one collection. Scholars of both musicology and women's studies are presented with a unique opportunity to explore the varied compositions of late 18th, 19th- and early-20th century European and American women.
